Stop, Drop, and Cower

A guide to safe interaction with government agents

Comprised of Many,
Performing as One

SAFETY FIRST!

Three simple actions could save your life! Any time you are in the presence of a government agent, remember this RULE OF THREE:

- ◆ STOP — Any action can be considered threatening by a government agent.
- ◆ DROP — This allows the agent to quickly gain control of the area.
- ◆ COWER — There is no redress for any “wrong” done to you: this is because the action of a government agent is always right, his judgment correct, and his intellect unsurpassed.

Mastering the principles behind these actions will ensure that your interactions with government agents are simple undemanding, and pleasant.

Never make sudden movements around a government agent. Any voluntary action on your part can be considered Resisting Arrest, Obstruction, or Disturbing the Peace.

Since a government agent's time and energy are far more important than yours, and an officer's convenience is more valuable than your well-being, you owe them the utmost deference.

Always consider how to make the government agent's job easier. Do your best to comply with every request. Consider how much the government agent risks every time he dons his uniform. It is proper to show this respect to those in authority.

Because you are in the presence of those so obviously your better, you should render obeisance.

Abase yourself! You must realize that your personal well-being hangs on the agent's discretion.

There is nothing more appropriate than to prostrate yourself in the presence of the avatars of your benevolent government's supreme will.

Forever forget those obsolete notions of the past: equality, civil rights, legal standing and Constitutional constraint on the government.

Everything you were taught in school is true. There is zero tolerance, authorities are right, permission is required for the simplest thing, your needs and desires do not matter: you are government property.

Indeed, to show your proper respect for government agents, you should cower in fear. Plead for mercy from these angels of the only god that exists: the government.

Relinquish your pride and dignity; prostrate, appeal, and appease; cower to those that are veritable gods walking among you! There is nothing that they do not know, your guilt is evidenced by their mere suspicion of you.

Submit! You are nothing but a worm. There is no peace, there is no justice, there is only our utter and absolute domination of every aspect of your life.

KNOW YOUR HOLDER RIGHTS

Anything you say or don't say can and will be used against you in a secret court operating above the law!
